
YOUNG PLANTS IN VOGELSANG

April 2020

With our latest new planting in Neustadter Vogelsang, we are taking another step towards reactivating Neustadt's historic flagship vineyard and also making an important ecological contribution.

The approximately 1ha section in the "Mittlerer Vogelsang" was taken over by the city of Neustadt an der Weinstrasse in November 2018. After various terrain adjustments and a subsequent revitalization phase, the vineyard was newly created in April this year. Primitive Riesling clones were planted on the barren shell limestone soil, which we believe has the potential to produce great wines in the near future.

The first harvest is expected in 2022, and the premiere wine will therefore be available from spring 2023. We are really looking forward to it.

PS: The remaining sections of the Vogelsang (the plots further up in the "Oberer Vogelsang", one of the highest vineyards in the Palatinate and seat of the Deidesheimer Temple, and the prime site below in the Ziegelberg) will be transferred to our portfolio at the end of the year. This marks the end of a multi-year transition process and a new chapter in the history of this prestigious location begins.
